

Soul Realignment

Soul Realignment works with what may be the ultimate manifestation of personal energy, the soul itself. An individual's soul is like an infinite recorder; it documents experiences in this life and past lives, and transmutes those experiences into energies that it carries for eternity.

While some of the energies our souls carry are positive, promoting joy and happiness, others are negative or limiting, creating blocks and restrictions. Physical ailments are chronic issues and are often caused by energies held within the body's memory from past soul experiences. Once those energies have cleared and been released from the soul body, the person feels relief; they don't react to things as strongly, and they don't come out with anger. They instead, experience life more calmly and peacefully.

In soul realignment the tool for energetic release is the practitioner. The practitioner must be a clear, accurate and neutral channel, a translator between the client and the soul, which is the sum total of that client's life but also all other experiences. It is a much more expanded consciousness than the client is aware of. By tapping into the client's soul, the practitioner can read what past experiences are causing blocks, and then communicates with the soul and the client's spiritual guides to release the negative energy baggage and shut down negative behavior programming. The practitioner will access the soul record, looking for restrictions that the soul is ready to release. Past lives are accessed so the soul can remember, and agree to let go.